From the BOARD CHAIRMAN

Prof. Abubakar Mu'azu

The year 2025 tested Nigeria's security, justice, and governance systems at a higher altitude of risk and complexity. Resurgent violence, civic unrest, shrinking civic space, and renewed demands for accountability placed the social contract under unprecedented strain. These pressures demanded not just endurance, but adaptation. In this defining moment, CLEEN Foundation gained altitude strategically, institutionally, and programmatically; remaining guided by evidence, anchored in communities, and driven by an unwavering commitment to rights, accountability, and democratic stability.

Executive Director Across Nigeria's six geopolitical zones, we expanded our operational altitude and deepened our adaptive capacity. Through strategic partnerships with the Royal Norwegian Embassy, Open Society Foundations, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), Ford Foundation made an inroad to IOM and other allies, we translated research into reform, advocacy into action, and policy into practice. Whether accelerating justice delivery through strengthened implementation of the Administration of Criminal Justice Laws (ACJL), advancing the Women, Peace and Security agenda, improving election security management, or shaping national discourse on policing, law enforcement, civic space, security sector reform, and governance, CLEEN demonstrated that indigenous leadership can adapt to complexity and still deliver systemic change.

At this higher altitude, our work remained firmly people-centred. We are particularly proud of the outcomes and impacts achieved in 2025: women mediators preventing, mediating, and resolving conflicts at community levels; citizens empowered to demand justice and accountability; security institutions adopting more professional and people-centred approaches; and democratic processes safeguarded through credible, coordinated election security interventions. These results reaffirm our belief that sustainable security is not imposed from above, but built through trust, inclusion, and accountability.

When evidence guides action and courage sustains advocacy, reform is no longer aspirational, it becomes inevitable.

Looking ahead to 2026, CLEEN's adaptive lens turns to emerging frontiers of Digital Justice and Climate Security, new altitudes where governance, technology, environment, and human security increasingly intersect. Our achievements in 2025, firmly anchored in the 2024–2028 Institutional Strategy, confirm that CLEEN remains a vital bridge between the aspirations of the Nigerian people and the functionality of state institutions.

We extend our deepest gratitude to the Board for the guidance and strategic leadership through the years and the entire staff, whose dedication across regional and national offices remains our greatest asset, and to our partners, whose trust and collaboration enable us to continue building a safer, more just, and resilient Nigeria, no matter the altitude.

From the EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Peter Maduoma

In 2025, CLEEN Foundation consolidated its position as a leading indigenous voice on security and justice sector reform, public safety, governance, and democratic accountability in Nigeria. Operating in an increasingly volatile security environment, defined by armed violence, insurgency, banditry, secessionist agitation, shrinking civic space, protracted communal conflicts, the proliferation of small arms and light weapons, and heightened public demands for institutional reform, CLEEN deliberately shifted from data generation alone to evidence-driven action. Through rigorous research, strategic advocacy, strong partnerships, and context-responsive programming, the Foundation expanded its footprint across Nigeria's six geopolitical zones and delivered interventions that strengthened institutions, improved community trust and accountability, reinforced democratic principles, and enhanced national resilience.

Justice reform remained a central pillar of CLEEN's work, with state offices translating national mandates into practical, people-centred outcomes. Lagos continued to build resilience among vulnerable young people. Through the PREVENT approach, TAG and the Anthony Joshua interventions built skills and provided alternative pathways for sustainability. The Edo State Office spearheaded the drafting of the Women's Economic Empowerment Bill and supported the development of a Standard Operating Procedure for the Edo State Migration Management Agency (EDMA). In parallel, the Owerri Office supported institutional resilience, strengthening justice sector coordination through capacity-building on the Administration of Criminal Justice Law (ACJL) for judicial and policing stakeholders across Imo and Enugu States. Nationwide, CLEEN ensured that justice policies translated into measurable change, including the facilitation of inmate releases through 24 investigative visits to detention facilities in Edo State under the RoLAC Programme.

CLEEN also played a decisive role in safeguarding democratic stability. During the 2025 Anambra State Governorship Election, the Foundation trained and deployed election observers, conducted an Election Security Threat Assessment across all 21 local government areas, and coordinated the Election Security Support Centre. Research and evidence continued to anchor CLEEN's policy, legislative, and institutional influence.

Advancing the Women, Peace, and Security (WPS) agenda remained a defining achievement in 2025. Nationwide, CLEEN empowered over 1,700 women mediators to prevent, manage, and resolve conflict. The Edo and Owerri offices localized these efforts through International Women's Day mobilizations and targeted advocacy with the Ministry of Women Affairs. In the area of public safety and policing reform, CLEEN reached over 135,000 citizens nationwide, including more than 1,800 individuals through market-based campaigns in Edo State, delivering awareness sessions on human rights and the prevention of gender-based violence (GBV). From spearheading the maiden National Police Day to supporting Weapons and Ammunition Management initiatives in Borno State, CLEEN's interventions significantly strengthened professionalism within the security sector.

Looking ahead to 2026 and beyond, CLEEN Foundation remains guided by its 2024–2028 Institutional Strategic Plan. Key priorities include expanding Digital Justice Initiatives to counter AI-driven disinformation, pioneering Climate Security interventions to address resource-based conflicts, scaling Small Arms and Light Weapons (SALW).

Introduction

Reflecting Gains, Altitude and Adaptive Approaches in 2025

Building on previous gains, 2025 marked a new altitude of national reach and influence. CLEEN expanded its operational footprint across the six geopolitical zones, driven by the launch of a flagship project supported by the Royal Norwegian Embassy. This strategic partnership enhanced both scale and depth, enabling the Foundation to respond decisively at a critical juncture in Nigeria's security and governance trajectory while sustaining long-term reform efforts.

Our commitment to a fair, people-centred, and rights-based criminal justice system reached new heights with the rollout of the project “Strengthening Rights-Based Approaches to ACJA Frameworks and Advancing the Women, Peace & Security Agenda in Nigeria.” Implemented across 12 states, the project accelerated justice delivery, strengthened institutional compliance, and ensured that the protections and human rights embedded in the Administration of Criminal Justice Act (ACJA) are translated from statutory intent into lived realities for both victims and accused persons.

In advancing communal stability, CLEEN applied adaptive peacebuilding approaches through the Women, Peace, and Security agenda. By training and empowering women mediators as conflict prevention and peacebuilding experts, the Foundation supported early identification and proactive resolution of conflicts in Kaduna, Plateau, Benue, Imo, and Nasarawa States. These interventions shifted entrenched narratives, repositioning women from the margins of victimhood to central actors in peace, security, and community resilience.

The 2025 Anambra State Governorship Election further underscored CLEEN's role as a pillar of democratic governance. Through its Election Security Management Project, the Foundation deployed hundreds of trained observers across all 21 local government areas. Strategic advocacy for advanced surveillance measures—including the use of drones and aerial monitoring—was adopted by security agencies, contributing to one of the most professional, innovative, and peaceful elections in recent Nigerian history.

As we reflect on the gains of 2025, CLEEN Foundation has consolidated its position at a higher altitude within Nigeria's civic–security architecture. Guided by adaptive strategies and anchored in the 2024–2028 Institutional Strategy, the Foundation aligned domestic interventions with global and national frameworks including UNSCR 1325, the National Security Strategy, the Police and Electoral Acts, and the Administration of Criminal Justice Act. These efforts reaffirm that indigenous leadership—when paired with innovation, evidence, and international cooperation—can sustain reform, restore public trust, and drive the transformative change Nigeria deserves.

Our Programmes,
Interventions,
& Impacts In
2025

...Promoting Accountability & Justice

The CLEEN Foundation has significantly advanced criminal justice reform and security sector governance across Nigeria through high-level strategic partnerships. Through the collaboration with the Nigeria Governors Forum, National Institute for Policy and Strategic Studies and the Chief Judge of Enugu State, eighty-six prison inmates (86) were released and supported the development of twelve (12) State Action Plans funded by the Norwegian Embassy. CLEEN Foundation is currently supporting Nassarawa and Imo in the design of the Women, Peace and Security- State Action Plan. These efforts ensure that justice reforms moves from abstract policies on paper into measurable local practices addressing real time challenges within the criminal justice system for vulnerable victims of the system.

Central to the mission is the capacity-building of over 1,700 women mediation actors and 360 law enforcement and judicial officials. This network focuses on the effective implementation of the Administration of Criminal Justice Law (ACJL) through the newly inaugurated coordination platforms – the Administration of Criminal justice Working Group across twelve focal states & State Multi-Stakeholder Implementation & Monitoring Committee on WPS in 5 states. Under the Ford project we have engaged capacity strengthening for 150 Divisional Police Officers, 36 FPROs Over 200+ Gender Desk Officers across divisions and have institutionalized rights-based frameworks within the Nigeria Police Force, CLEEN has enhanced professionalism of the police force while reaching over one hundred and thirty five (135,000) citizens through awareness campaigns.

In Ondo state, CLEEN trained over 100+ Gender Desk Officers. This training was as the request of the Commissioner of Police as a result of the visible and impact driven interventions anchored on gender justice. The Ford project offered an opportunity for this intervention. This event offered the chance to work with FIDA and the women wing of NMA to advocate for testing kits. CLEEN also supported with reporting tools and case management handling manual.

CLEEN Foundation further deepened its justice reform portfolio within the year by strengthening the Administration of Criminal Justice Law (ACJL) in Edo State, supported by the Rule of Law and Anti-Corruption Programme (RoLAC). Through strategic partnership with key institutions and leaders of the system- the court, Ministry of Justice, the Nigeria Police Force, the Nigeria Correctional Service, State Attorney Generals & Commissioner of Justice, State Chief Judge and State Commissioner of Police, the foundation anchored reforms within the criminal justice system and institutionalized monthly magistrate visits to detention facilities to safeguard human rights. This intervention delivered measurable progress in accountability and access to justice, complemented by the launch of the IYOBOR "HELP" mobile application, which modernizes citizen engagement and improved citizen access to justice, enabling real-time reporting of law enforcement misconduct.

...Improving Election Security Management in Nigeria

CLEEN Foundation strengthened election preparedness for the 2025 Anambra Governorship Election with support from the Open Society Foundations by delivering a comprehensive intervention towards the election. Conduct of Security Threat Assessment to guided strategic security deployment and provisioning for the election. The assessment identified security risk factors, actors and perpetrators of violence and provided evidence-based recommendations that informed security deployment, inter-agency coordination, and voter protection strategies. These findings were shared with INEC, security agencies, civil society stakeholders and media to enhance early warning and risk mitigation ahead of the polls.

To operationalise this work, CLEEN activated its Election Security Support Centre and deployed trained observers across all 21 local government areas in Anambra State. Real-time reporting tools enabled the documentation of security conduct, voter safety, and human rights compliance, contributing to improved situational awareness and rapid escalation of incidents. Building on these experiences, CLEEN is advancing innovative election observation models, including plans to introduce “Journalist Observers” in future elections in states such as Osun and Ekiti. This model aims to integrate trained media professionals into election observation efforts, expanding civic oversight, improving transparency, and strengthening public confidence through credible, timely reporting on electoral and security processes.

...Enhancing Public Safety & Security in Nigeria

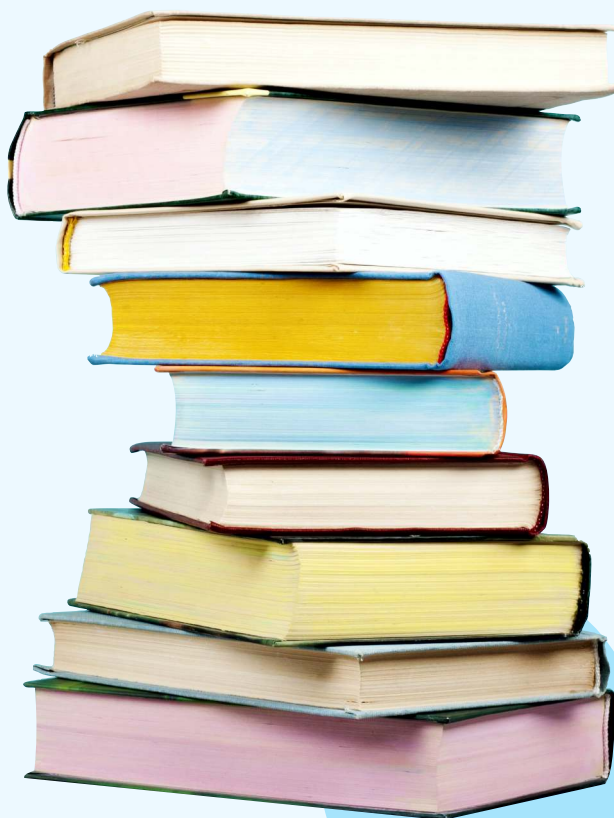

CLEEN Foundation has advanced civic accountability, security sector reform, and community resilience across Nigeria through strategic partnerships with UNDP, the US Embassy, the Norwegian Embassy, and Tetra Tech. In Borno State, CLEEN and UNDP operationalised Weapons and Ammunition Management (WAM) Standard Operating Procedures through a Technical Working Group, adapting the SoPs to local realities, developing an implementation roadmap, and improving coordination between community and institutional actors to strengthen arms control and reporting mechanisms. 2 strategic publications on reintegration and capacity enhancement for Volunteer Security Organizations in the BAY States. The second publication was on Situation Analysis and Best Practices on Weapons and Ammunition Management in the BAY States.

With support from the US Embassy and UNDP, across security and peacebuilding interventions, CLEEN promoted trauma-informed policing, improved civil-military relations, and strengthened community-led conflict prevention approaches. These efforts enhanced early-warning systems, secured the backing of Commissioners of Police, supported legislative approval for the Zamfara Community Guard, and generated a replicable model for local peacebuilding and mediation that helped prevent conflict escalation and build public trust in security institutions.

Beyond institutional reform, CLEEN strengthened youth resilience and crime prevention through community-based empowerment models. In Lagos State, with support from Clean Heart Community, CLEEN implemented the Anthony Joshua-inspired sports-for-development initiative, combining boxing and football with behavioural coaching, mentorship, and psychosocial support for vulnerable youths. The programme delivered measurable social outcomes, including improved emotional regulation, reduced risky behaviour, stronger peer support systems, and increased parental engagement, demonstrating the effectiveness of integrated justice, youth development, and prevention-focused programming in enhancing social cohesion and long-term security.

Research & Strategy Development

The unit was active across the year. From the 2 UNDP research, to addition 2 researches under the Norway project, plus the OSF research on Community Policing, we can say that the research traffic was high. Accuracy, integrity, ethics and professionalism were introduced. Through robust policy briefs and election security assessments, the Foundation provides actionable insights that inform policymakers, security agencies, and civil society actors. CLEEN, funded by Open Society Foundation, also conducts extensive community surveys to gauge public trust in policing and the effectiveness of local security structures, generating data that supports more responsive, community-centered security interventions. Additionally, with support from the Royal Norwegian Embassy, CLEEN conducted baseline research on the Administration of Criminal Justice Act (ACJA) and the Women, Peace, and Security (WPS) agenda across 12 states identified capacity gaps and informed targeted interventions. including the development of State Action Plans, capacity-building workshops, and enhanced inclusion of women in justice and peace processes. These efforts ensure that CLEEN's programs and advocacy are grounded in evidence and deliver measurable, systemic impact.

Branch Operations

CLEEN Foundation Edo State office was committed to institutional reform through high-level strategic advocacy and legislative engagement. We played a pivotal role in the state's governance framework by co-drafting the Standard Operating Procedures (SOP) for the Edo State Migration Management Agency (EDMA) and spearheading the drafting and submission of the Women Economic Bill to the State House of Assembly. Our advocacy efforts extended to the highest levels of judiciary and law enforcement, including strategic consultations with the Chief Judge, the Attorney General, and the State Police Command. Through partnerships with the Smile Africa Network and the civil society observatory, CLEEN bridged the gap between community leaders, traditional institutions, and local government chairmen in response to drug abuse, enhancing grassroots security and intelligence gathering. Magistrate visit was significant in 2025.

On the operational front, CLEEN Foundation delivered measurable impact through extensive capacity building and human rights protections across the state. We conducted four major training programs that enhanced the professional expertise of two hundred (200) stakeholders, including members of the Nigerian Police Force, FIDA, and the Administration of Criminal Justice Monitoring Committee (ACJMC). Our commitment to justice was further demonstrated through twenty-four (24) investigative visits to detention facilities under the RoLAC program, facilitating the expedited release of inmates and ensuring legal compliance. Furthermore, our community outreach reached over one-thousand eight hundred (1,800) individuals through market campaigns. The collaboration between CLEEN Foundation Edo Office with the Ministry of Women Affairs and the Nigeria Union of Journalists (NUJ) brought home the message of social justice and gender advocacy.

Branch Operations

CLEEN Foundation Owerri Office demonstrated remarkable resilience, maintaining a high level of impact through strategic partnerships. A primary focus was the enhancement of the Southeast security ecosystem, achieved through series of school sensitization programs on crime prevention and the facilitation of quarterly Police/CSO forums. These dialogues were instrumental in rebuilding public trust and fostering collaboration between civil society and police leadership. The office played a critical role in advancing electoral integrity, providing vital security coordination, pre-election analysis, and monitoring for the 2025 Anambra State Governorship Election.

Our commitment to Gender Justice and Legal Reform was equally robust, as the Owerri office led extensive awareness campaigns on Gender-Based Violence (GBV) and the Women, Peace, and Security (WPS). Through community outreach with radio engagements, we expanded our advocacy reach on human trafficking and citizen safety in partnership with NAPTIP and the Nigeria Police Force. CLEEN Owerri office coordinated capacity-strengthening sessions for judicial and policing stakeholders in Imo and Enugu States, focusing on the implementation of the Administration of Criminal Justice Law (ACJL). These efforts have significantly enhanced justice sector coordination and sustained CLEEN Foundation's position as a leading authority on security sector reform and governance in the Southeast.

Branch Operations

In 2025, the Lagos Office achieved significant milestones in community safety and youth development through the consolidation of the Brighter Futures Programme, implemented under the Clean Heart Community (CHC)/SOC-Prevent Project and supported by partners including TAG International and Anthony Joshua, and the Norwegian-supported Criminal Justice Reform project. Operating across Ifako Ijaiye, Ikorodu, and Ajeromi Ifelodun LGAs, the office successfully utilized structured sports-based psychosocial interventions, resilience-building sessions, and family engagement activities to build resilience in over 60 vulnerable youths. This initiative resulted in a documented 70% increase in participant self-confidence and goal orientation. Furthermore, the program transformed domestic support systems, with over 90% of participating parents reporting improved communication and a renewed commitment to positive parenting. By institutionalizing Crime Prevention Partnerships (CPPs) and Steering Groups (CPSGs), the office moved beyond service delivery to create sustainable, community-led platforms for accountability and risk mitigation.

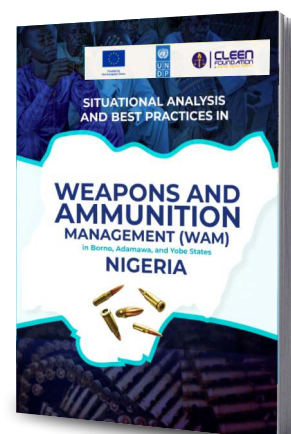

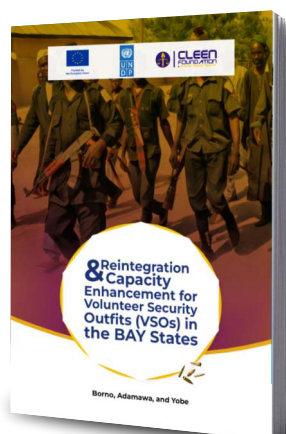

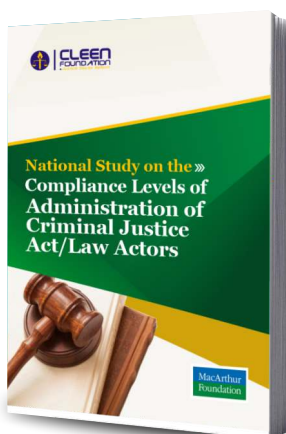

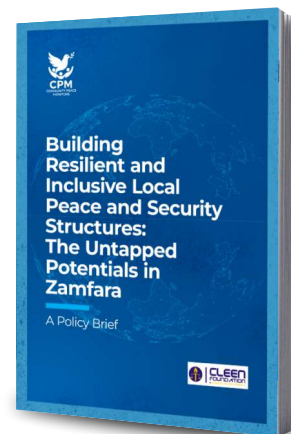

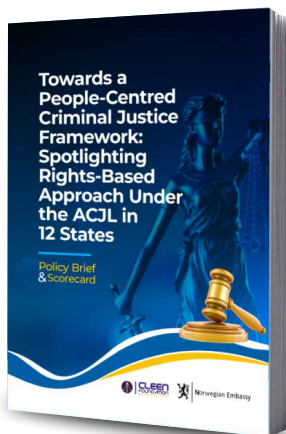

Parallel to community-level interventions, the office made transformative strides in institutional reform and strategic advocacy. Under the Norwegian project, capacity-building initiatives for over 60 justice sector stakeholders culminated in the formal establishment of the Lagos State ACJL Monitoring Committee, a vital mechanism for inter-agency coordination and legal compliance. To ensure the longevity of these gains, the office engaged in high-level advocacy with the Office of the Secretary to the State Government and the Office of the First Lady, securing critical government buy-in for future scale-up. By aligning community-level impacts with state policy priorities through the Ministries of Wealth Creation and Youth Development, the Lagos Office has solidified its position as a strategic partner in driving long-term justice reform and social stability in Lagos State.

Our Publications

In 2025, CLEEN Foundation significantly expanded its policy influence through a focused portfolio of evidence-based publications and strategic policy briefs. Grounded in activity data from across its programmes, the Foundation prioritized transforming research findings into practical, actionable roadmaps for strengthening national security, justice delivery, and civic accountability. Rather than producing research for its own sake, CLEEN positioned each publication as a tool for decision-making, reform implementation, and public engagement.

Conclusion

As we close the chapter on 2025, CLEEN Foundation has done more than navigate a volatile security and political landscape, we have redefined indigenous leadership in the Global South, demonstrating that when data-driven research meets fearless advocacy, systemic change is possible, from jail delivery exercises in Enugu to high-tech data driven monitoring during the Anambra elections. We take immense pride in the 1,700 women mediators now anchoring peace in their communities and the 135,000 citizens empowered to report injustice, tangible evidence that the social contract in Nigeria is being restored. Our partnerships with the Royal Norwegian Embassy, the EU, UN Women, Tetra-Tech, IOM, UNDP, and others have amplified our reach, yet it is the trust of the Nigerian people that remains our greatest asset. Looking at 2026, we are stepping onto the global stage to address new frontiers of security, countering AI-driven disinformation through our Truth Desk, pioneering Climate Security models to prevent resource conflict, and advocating for blockchain-secured justice. With a clear roadmap, a dedicated team, and unshakeable resolve, CLEEN is not just imagining a safer, more equitable Africa, we are building it every single day.
